Next Monday Morning

14 JOBS PROGRESSING

Book Repairing Starts in Various Schools

Work is expected to start Monday on construction of the new bridge over Buskirk run on the Palestine-Williamsport road in Monroe township.

Official release of the project under WPA was announced Thursday by Vattier Courtright, field engineer. The bridge will be a rigid frame concrete arch structure with a 59-foot span and 26-foot roadway. It will be same type and size bridge as constructed over Pike Hole creek in Salt Creek township.

$23,545 Project

Federal funds on the project are listed at $16,188 and the county's share, $7,357, making a total of $23,545. The project will furnish employment to approximately 40 men.

The new bridge is the county's share of the improvement program of the highway. Mr. Courtright explained. This road is now being improved under the state's road program.

Fifty-five workers, some who have been off the WPA payrolls since the corn cutting season and others whose names were certified for employment by the county relief agency, have been returned to WPA. A part of the list started to work Thursday and others will start Friday. They were distributed among the 14 projects now in operation. The total number employed on WPA in the county at the present time is 370.

Book Repair Starts

Two projects recently approved, improvements on some Deer Creek township roads and book repairing for schools, opened Thursday.

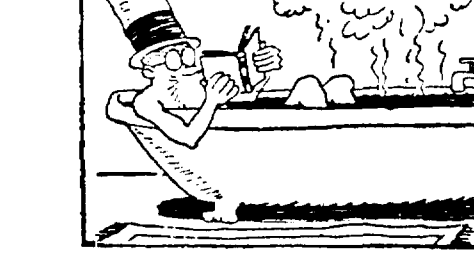

Four women are employed on the book repairing project being conducted at the county relief office.

The fourteen projects now in operation, including the Deer Creek road work and book repairing program, are modernization of the Jackson township school heating system; sewing center, clothing renovation, Pike Hole creek bridge, city storm and sanitary sewers, Derby road work, court-house improvements, adult emergency school, surplus commodity distribution, community sanitation program and the canal project.

Marx Silent About New O.N.G. Unit

Although reliable sources report an Ohio National Guard battery outfit will be assigned to Circleville to replace the quartermaster company now operating here, the office of Adjutant General Emil Marx said Thursday that no official announcement can be made about the change.

Capt. E. J. Fisher, assistant to the adjutant general, told The Herald that plans have not yet been submitted to the War Department in Washington D. C., so nothing can be announced in Columbus.

A survey will be made preliminarily to the change. It is rumored the company would be kept at the same strength as at present with Joe M. Lynch as commanding officer.

NEGRO ADMITS BRUTAL MURDER IN APARTMENT

NEW YORK, Jan. 14—(UP)—Major Greene, wiry, 33-year-old negro porter, confessed today after police had questioned him more than 26 hours, that he killed Mrs. Mary Harriet Case, pretty college graduate and designer.

District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan of Queens county announced that Greene acknowledged having struck the 25-year-old matron on the head with a hammer and dumping her body into the tub in the bathroom of her Jackson Heights apartment Monday afternoon. Theft was the negro's motive.

Despite the strong circumstantial evidence against him, Greene had insisted for hours that he had never been in the Case apartment. "Not me, not me, mister," he said over and over again.

At 3:45 a. m. today, he broke down at Manhattan police headquarters. He was returned to the suburban Newtown station, from which the investigation was directed, and dictated a confession. His face was drawn and he could hardly walk. A detective on either side helped him up the stairs.

KERNS REPORTS 1,050 IMMUNIZED FOR DIPHTHERIA

One thousand and fifty Pickaway county school children were immunized against diphtheria during 1936 by Dr. V. D. Kerns, county health commissioner, his annual report reveals. During the year 157 Schick tests for diphtheria were given.

Forty tuberculin tests were given during the year. Eight cases are under the commissioner's supervision at the present time. In Pickaway county, exclusive of Circleville, there were 270 births reported and 249 deaths. Eighty-nine cases of communicable diseases were listed. There were twelve positive cases of rabies in animals.

Although reports are not fully completed on the Christmas seal sale the total is expected to exceed $1,000. So far $989 has been received.

Dr. Kerns was in Columbus Thursday attending a meeting of county health commissioners.

WET FOG HELPS CIVILIANS FLEE BESIEGED CITY

MADRID, Jan. 14—(UP)—Civil authorities took advantage of a thick, wet fog which halted fighting on the Madrid front to speed evacuation of non-combatants today.

Nearly 10,000 persons were scheduled to be moved to the sea coast every day under plans of the evacuation committee.

(Uncensored reports reaching Hendaye, on the frontier, said 400,000 persons had already been evacuated and another 250,000 were scheduled to go within the next few days, reducing Madrid's civil population to about 150,000—Ed.)

Government military authorities reported the insurgent artillery had shelled their positions in the Guadalajara sector "without important results" and had attacked Santa Maria De Alameda, in the escorial sector with intense rifle and artillery fire which was "answered" by loyalist troops.

The army spokesmen said loyalist troops had been able to strengthen their positions at several points by surprise attacks during the last 24 hours.

CHIEF G-MAN BELIEVES MORE THAN ONE INVOLVED IN CASE

Rusty Hammer, Thought Murder Weapon, Found Along Road Near Spot Body of Youngster Was Found Beaten

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation today indicated federal authorities believe that more than one kidnaper may be involved in the abduction and slaying of 10 year old Charles Mattson.

EVERETT, Wash., Jan. 14—(UP)—Two suspects, a blood-stained automobile, and a rusty hammer were held by authorities today as the search for the degenerate kidnaper-slayer of 10 year old Charles Mattson moved relentlessly forward.

The search centered in Everett, near where the naked body of the little victim was found Monday in a snow bank. The automobile was virtually established to be the machine used by the criminal in disposing of the body, and there was a possibility that the hammer was the weapon that smashed the child's skull after he had been knifed and subjected to an unnatural assault.

BILL WOULD PUT MUNITIONS INTO FEDERAL HANDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—(UP)—Anti-war legislation entered a new phase today with the introduction in the senate and house of the Lundeen-Johnson bill for government ownership and control of the munitions industry.

Sen. Ernest Lundeen, F-L, Minn., and Rep. Dewey W. Johnson, F-L, Minn., proposed the measure giving the government power to acquire factories, dry docks and yards to build vessels, aircraft and mobile armaments for national defense. It would also prohibit the import or export of munitions or armaments except by the government.

Sponsors of the measure said it was written to eliminate the private profit motive from the manufacture of armaments and munitions.

"Congress should stop the traffic in arms designed to destroy human life and property," they said.

OHIO ASSEMBLY MAY VACATION FOR INAUGURAL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14—(UP)—Despite a flood of new bills awaiting consideration, the house today was expected to follow the example of the senate and suspend operations until Jan. 25 to permit members to go to Washington for President Roosevelt's inauguration Jan. 20 and the "third general assembly" the following day.

The upper house yesterday unanimously adopted a joint resolution providing for the extended recess and the measure was sent to the house for consideration today. Senate spokesmen said they had been assured the house was favorable to the action.

Five legislators from each house will attend the inauguration, while six from each body will attend sessions of the "general assembly" for discussion of model state legislation.

More than 30 new bills were introduced in both houses yesterday, at least four of them administration-inspired and one carrying the emergency clause.

In addition, the senate pushed through the administration's $22,222,587 partial appropriations bill, passed earlier by the house, without amendment. The bill is a stop-gap measure providing for maintenance and salary payments until the regular appropriation bill is ready.

34 PLANTS OUT OF WORK

Demonstrations Staged by Men to End Deadlock

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 14—(UP)—Gov. Frank Murphy brought strikers and management together in his office today in an attempt to find a formula that will reopen General Motors plants and put 115,000 idle men back to work.

Seven men—Murphy and three representatives of each side—met at 11 a. m.

General Motors sent its executive vice president, William H. Knudsen; its general counsel, John Thomas Smith; the chairman of its finance committee, Donaldson Brown.

The automobile workers' union was represented by Homer Martin, its president, Wyndham Miller, vice president, and John Brophy, director of the committee for industrial organization.

Conference is First

It is the first conference between the corporation and the union since the strike began to spread a day night ago.

Nearly 2,000 national guardsmen occupied Flint where fighting occurred between strikers and police earlier in the week, but the front of the struggle seemed to be away from violence, toward peaceful negotiation. "Sit-down" strikers were in possession of three General Motors plants at Flint, but the troops made no effort to remove them.

Murphy hoped that the conference could "reach a prompt solution, tentative or otherwise, that will permit resumption of normal business activity."

The situation along the $1,500,000,000 corporation's assembly lines stood as follows:

- 1—Thirty-four of General Motors 59 plants were closed either because of strikes or lack of materials.
- 2—General Motors officials said all of its automotive plants probably would be closed by the end of the next week, putting a total of 135,000 men out of work.
- 3—Work continued in assembly plants on the west coast because they had materials on hand.
- 4—General Motors had expected to produce 224,000 units in January, but officials said that by the end of next week production would be about one of third of that.

Union's Status

The status of the union at this point of the struggle was:

- 1—State relief officials reported there had been no appreciable applications for aid from strikers, indicating that the union had funds.

LIMITATION LEAGUE ASSAILS ASSEMBLY COST

Telephone, Telegraph and Postage Bills of House Members Attacked

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14 — (UP)—The Ohio Tax Limitation League today demanded that the state stop paying the personal telephone, telegraph and postage bills of members of the general assembly. These bills totaled approximately $48,000 in 1935-36.

League spokesman, W. I. Lawrence, Columbus, secretary-treasurer, and Arnett Harbage, West Jefferson farmer, made this demand in writing of the new state auditor and the clerks of the senate and the house.

They asked that the auditor check the $5,587 and the $6,755 personal expenses accounts made during the last biennium by former Senator William H. Rorer, Norwalk, and former Representative Julian H. Schweller, Putnam county respectively.

To Probe Funds They asked the auditor to determine if all of the legislative matters handled by the law firm of Bateman & Gibson, for which it received $13,500 from the senate during the last two years were in special committees authorized to make such expenditures.

Yesterday the league warned the state auditor not to pay the expense accounts of members of the present assembly who are scheduled to go to Washington on committees to attend the inauguration of President Roosevelt and meetings of the third assembly.

The auditor was told that if he paid the expense accounts of the 20 committee members, and the photographers who are to accompany the senate members to the committee to the third assembly the league will sue to collect the money for the state from him or his bondsmen.

When this demand was made the state auditor declared that if such payments were not legal, they would not be allowed.

Previously the league, through Harbage, obtained a temporary injunction preventing members of the last house from drawing $21,700 in mileage for trips they did not actually make. This case is still pending.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

America's most famous husband — Charlie Ruggles — is in hot water again! And plenty of hot water! And mostly because he didn't take the excellent bit of advice contained in the title of his latest comedy, "Mind Your Own Business," which closes at the Cliftona Theatre tonight.

In this delightful domestic comedy Ruggles begins as his usual unassuming, meek and nose-to-the-grindstone self as editor of a birds-and-bees column of a large newspaper. It's not much of a job — but he loves it. He also loves the Boy Scouts, who promised to make him a member of the Alligator Patrol as soon as he learns to pitch his tent properly and to perform a score or more of the chores which are of such concern to Boy Scouts.

Clark Writes Church Article for Magazine

An article "A Layman Looks at the Church," written by Fred C. Clark, funeral director, has been printed in recent issue of a national church publication, "The Southern Churchman."

The article is a friendly criticism of church services and recommendations Mr. Clark believes will increase church attendance.

Excerpts from his article follow: "My idea of the ideal minister would be one who could combine the intelligence and the learning of a theological scholar with the knack of being and acting like a real human being. In other words, in my opinion, there is no profession known to man in which personality is so important. In fact, I think that it is more essential that a minister be an effect in friend-maker and social leader, than that he be a master of theology. Give me a man who can make every member of his congregation look upon him as a friend, and a fellow-worker, and I'll be content to listen to his sermons.

Services Too Long "If a minister uses common sense he will avoid long-winded sermons and long-drawn-out services. Probably there is nothing so fatal to church attendance as services that are too long. Make the services short and pointed, avoid unnecessary embellishments and flowery oratory; give the Kermit Maynard's collection of James Oliver Curwood first editions is now complete. This fighting star has assembled, catalogued and filed, in a huge steel vault, every item Mr. Curwood ever published.

The final book necessary to make Kermit Maynard's collection of Curwood a book-collector's triumph was the acquisition of "The Fatal Note," from which Stephen Norris adapted "Phantom Patrol," which is the current James Oliver Curwood action-drama in which Kermit Maynard makes his way upward to a grand success and is the featured attraction at the Circle Theatre.

people good music of the familiar kinds they know and love, give them a chance to sing the old familiar hymns, and give them the warm hand of friendship in parting after the services.

"Another matter which is a common cause for criticism is the kind of pews which some churches have. I am thinking of the physical discomfort which a person has to suffer in so many churches. I suppose the average minister assumes that if he can stand on his feet and talk for three-quarters of an hour, surely the people in the congregation shouldn't mind sitting down for the same length of time. But, do the ministers ever stop to think that perhaps a lot of people would rather be standing up than sitting on those hard, uncomfortable benches that break their backs and paralyze their legs.

"Why, I've attended services in churches where my legs would go to sleep from the unnatural physical strain and my head would almost go to sleep from the mental strain of trying to follow a long-winded sermon. The only part of me that stayed awake was my back, and the only reason that it was awake was due to the fact that there was such a kink in it that it couldn't go to sleep. Just between ourselves, I'm in favor of organizing a league for better church pews."

ROBINSON ON RADIO

Edward G. Robinson stars in the Radio Theatre in Martin Falvin's famous play, "The Criminal Code," on Monday, January 18. This drama gives Robinson a strong role as the prison warden who dared political ruin because of his efforts to get one prisoner out of the ties of the "criminal code." Produced by Cecil B. DeMille, the play will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m.

Martin Brady, who will be played by Robinson, first meets young Bob Graham when he successfully prosecutes the latter for an accidental murder. Graham goes to prison, is caught in the web of the "criminal code," commits a second and premeditated murder. By that time Brady, the prosecutor, has become warden of the prison. His daughter Mary has fallen in love with Graham.

Torn by conflicting forces, love of his daughter, political ambition and real desire to help the young convict, Brady is helpless before the code that is the real law of the prison.

Although Robinson had appeared in ten plays of the Theatre Guild in New York before going into the movies it was "Little Caesar" that made him famous in the early days of the screen's gangster cycle. Roles of this sort

FLORIST TELLS HOW TO CARE FOR POINSETTIA

A great many folk would like to try to carry their poinsettia plants over to bloom another year. This is possible, says R. L. Brehmer, florist.

The plants should be placed in a fairly dry cellar immediately and permitted to dry. Then about April 1 the soil should be taken off the roots and the plant placed in a slightly larger pot with good ordinary garden soil and given a good watering. The top is then cut off with a sharp knife at about five or six inches above the soil. By warm weather the plant will have started growing and when the outdoors temperature is at summer heat in late May or early June the pot is sunk in the ground outdoors in a sunny location and kept watered until mid-August. It is taken into the house where the temperature is kept as uniform as possible. You will then have poin-

WATER UTILITY ASKS $22,335 ON OLD BILLS

Washington C. H. Defendant in Suit Which Brings Case Nearer Showdown

WASHINGTON C. H., Jan. 14.—A suit filed in the common pleas court by The Ohio Water Service Company, against the City of Washington, for payment of $22,355.66 with interest at six per cent from date due, brings one step nearer eventual showdown on the old bills owed by the city for fire hydrant rental over a period of years.

The Ohio Water Service Company already has a suit pending in common pleas court for $10,200, with interest, growing out of non-payment of fire hydrant rentals for service rendered prior to the time mentioned in the suit just filed.

In all, with interest, the amount now owed the water company on fire hydrant rental, is around $40,000. Payment of this amount is one of the serious problems faced by the city officials.

In the previous suit for $10,200, a demurrer was filed by the city, sustained by the lower courts and carried to the Ohio Supreme court, where reversal of the lower courts left the case pending for settlement.

The demurrer was filed on the grounds that there had been no certification that the funds for paying the rental were in the treasury or in the process of collection.

The present action is based on hydrant service April 1, 1933, up to October 1, 1935.

Part of the rental is based on $50 for each of 204 hydrants, and the remainder based on $45 rental for each hydrant, the latter rate having been ordered by the State Utilities Commission after the water company had appealed from rates of $35 fixed by city ordinance.

Just what the attitude of the city will be, probably will be determined at a council meeting soon.

Paid in Several Years

The water company sometime ago submitted a proposal whereby the principal sum of the amount due could be paid over a period of years, in increased water rentals to consumers generally, but no definite action has been taken on the proposal.

Incidentally the payment of the amount is also tied up in the city's proposal to purchase the water company, and pay the outstanding indebtedness with bonds similar to those issued for paying for the waterworks.

Following are the various amounts asked in the suit just filed, with interest at six per cent, with date when due:

- $1,813.76—Interest from July 1, 1933.
- $653.90—Interest from July 1, 1933.
- $2,295.00—Interest from October 1, 1933.
- $2,295.00—Interest from Jan. 1, 1934.
- $2,295.00—Interest from April 1, 1934.
- $2,295.00—Interest from July 1, 1934.
- $2,295.00—Interest from Oct. 1, 1934.
- $2,295.00—Interest from Jan. 1, 1935.
- $2,295.00—Interest from April 1, 1935.
- $2,295.00—Interest from July 1, 1935.
- $1,530.00—Interest from Oct. 1, 1935.

and later served as dean under the world's committee of that organiing fingerprints on the car and blood stains with the blood of the boy.

The automobile first was noticed by Mrs. Victor Foreland and Or-bin Stover. Stover reported it to the FBI. An agent, who inspected the car briefly, asked to use
Mrs. Foreland's telephone.

"It's the car," the agent told his superior, Mrs. Foreland said.
The automobile was identified as one stolen from Verne Williams of Everett. Its license plates had been replaced by plates stolen from the car of E. E. Parish, Arlington.

One of the Olympia prisoners was a former gardener in the neighborhood of the Mattson home at Tacoma. Police Captain Ray Hayes said he was an ex-convict, admitted knowing the Mattson family, and had been partially identified as the robber of the George Franklin home where two purported kidnaps attempt were made shortly before Charles Mattson was stolen.

Connection Denied

Captain Hayes said he was about 42 years old, weighed 150 pounds, was five feet six inches tall and wore a heavy black beard — which answers the description of the Mattson kidnaper. The man denied any connection with the Mattson case.

He was arrested before Charles' body was found, but the boy had been dead from four to six days then.

Yesterday, Charles' body was sealed in a mausoleum crypt following simple, private funeral ceremonies. Only the parents, Dr.
and Mrs. William W. Mattson and relatives were present.

at Urbana, and returned to Cincinnati to answer a non-support charge on file in H. O. Eveland's

TROTSKY'S OPPONENTS WATCH AS EXILE FINDS NEW HAVEN IN MEXICO

UNITED STATES BARS ITS DOORS TO OUSTED 'RED'

President Cardenas Asks For of Stalin to Make Home in Southern Nation

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Once again the "stormy petrel of the revolution", Leon Trotsky, settles in a new place of refuge.

Ten years ago he was expelled from the Communist party of Russia, and eventually from his homeland. Today only one nation in all the world offers him a resting place after his unfortunate adventure in Norway. Mexico, where many poets and miners now for the first time learn to read, from books on socialism, announces itself open to any political refugee.

The United States once was the greatest home for such refugees. Trotsky, himself, took advantage of this and lived in New York City just before the Russian revolution. But today it is not the United States, but her southern neighbor, that opens its doors to this "man without a country".

Foe of Stalin

As Trotsky takes up his residence in Mexico it under far different circumstances than the first time he had to leave the Soviet Union to live on a Turkish island. The years have sharpened every criticism of him, and every point of difference between him and the government of Josef Stalin.

When Lenin was alive, Trotsky, then head of the army, disagreed with him on fundamental policies, such as the signing of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, which ended the Russian participation in the World war, on trade union policy, collectivization of farms and the first five-year plan. Today Trotsky still holds to his unbending opposition. Soviet Russia has branded him as the leader of a band of terrorists who planned to murder Stalin, but managed only to get rid of Stalin's trusted aide, Kirov. All of Trotsky's old friends, who fought in the revolution together with him and Lenin and Stalin, have stood trial and paid with their lives for activities supposedly led by Trotsky. He is more alone than ever.

No one knows what Trotsky felt when he saw himself pushed out of the leadership and the limelight by Stalin following the death of Lenin, a fiery orator who could sway crowds, a writer of brilliant gifts, being supplanted by a hard-working, dynamic man from the province of Georgia. Trotsky already was a man of the world. He had been abroad in exile, and had edited newspapers read by the Russian intelligentsia. Stalin's work had kept him in Russia and in czarist prisons.

Frustration

Since that day when the choice of the Communist party fell on Stalin instead of Trotsky, his spectacular path has become more and more tinged with frustration and tragedy. In Norway he was kept a virtual prisoner, not even allowed to write the bitter and brilliant attacks upon the Stalin government which always flowed so freely from his pen.

He has had to sit by and watch how Stalin's policy of building a strong and self-sufficient Russia more flamboyant dream of a world has been carried out, while his revolution remains mere words on paper. He has his followers, too, but somehow their actions turn out in just as unlucky fashion as Trotsky's own. Today, in Spain, the Trotskyite party in Catalonia has just been ousted from participation in the government of this new-born Red state.

And as though heralding his entry into Mexico under an unlucky sign, one of his staunchest followers, the famous artist Diego Rivera, who had a great deal to do with persuading President Cardenas to invite Trotsky to Mexico, recently was beaten up in a restaurant by persons who resent the presence of the "stormy petrel".

If Trotsky Ruled—

If Trotsky had his way, there would be no talk of "indivisible peace" by Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, at the League of Nations. The Soviet Union would be openly aggressive, aiding revolutionary movements wherever they popped up all over the globe—in China, India or Spain. If Trotsky sat in the Kremlin instead of Stalin, the rest of the world would never sleep as relatively peaceful as now. But Trotsky is powerless. Once he left Russia the deadly sting was removed. He no longer wears a Red army uniform or has the chance to proudly review hundreds of thousands of troops under his command.

Is the battle for power between Trotsky and Stalin, which has gone on unabated for nearly 20 years,

Leon Trotsky

Josef Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia, who defeated Trotsky in their battle for power and caused his exile from Russia.

finally nearing its end? Or will the Third International, led by Stalin, and the Fourth International, Trotsky's creation, yet one day line up against each other for a final fight?

Trotskyites Watch

Much depends on developments during Trotsky's stay in Mexico. In the United States interested Trotskyites will observe from the sidelines of the Socialist party and still another International, the Second. For Trotsky's American followers recently joined the Socialist party en masse.

Meantime, other European leaders who have known exile and imprisonment—Mussolini, Hitler, Goering—may observe from their pinnacles and draw a breath of relief that they are safely out of that predicament. Only one leader will observe with extraordinary care—Stalin. Mexico is no peaceful place with traditions of democracy like Norway. And Trotsky comes here! And, yet, the majority of observers believe that the firebrand has burned out, that Trotsky, in this, his only remaining haven, will pass his accumulating years writing histories and philosophical works in his incisive, penetrating manner.

PATIENCE

IN retrospect, events may seem to have moved swiftly enough, and we may think also that other men make quick progress toward success, but it is rarely that our own fate and fortunes unfold at the pace we would choose. Our ambition lays out a hopeful course, which we are confident we can follow; our eyes have already seen the desired destination and, therefore, our heart and hopes outstrip the slow passage of events.

Interruptions and disappointments, irksome, trivial and beyond our anticipation and control, arise daily to check and prolong our labors, and it needs no less patience than endurance to weather such small storms and accidents.

But the passage of time in itself contributes to real achievement, and for this we may forgive the delays that prevent us from too headlong a course. Time permits us to mature in orderly fashion to the scale of our own ambitions; time leaves our enthusiasm with judgment and our self-confidence with proper humility; time reaches proportion and shows us where our best work belongs. This is a slow alchemy but necessary to ourselves and the work to which we are dedicated.

True patience is not merely a dull endurance of the hazards of fortune. It is rather the habit of turning to some account the changes and chances that lie in our path; so that when our high opportunity comes we may be ready for it.

LUCK AND HAPPINESS

WILLIAM COYLE, of Cincinnati, believes that sweepstakes winners are more to be pitied than envied.

Five years ago, Coyle won $20,000 on a ticket in the English Derby. He quit his job as elevator operator. But just recently he returned to duty—minus his winnings.

Coyle had been beset by all kinds of blue sky stock promoters, and had tried, without success, to establish himself in the garage, cafe and real estate business. Profits, however, were as scarce as hen's teeth, and now the job of running an elevator looks very good indeed.

If only on the theory of "easy come, easy go," money won by gambling is very likely to be of the fleeting variety. In any event, Coyle is convinced that the road to happiness is not exactly cluttered with people who were simply lucky in the "sweeps."

Kissing the bride isn't so common now. So many have done it before the ceremony.

A free land is one where a man who couldn't succeed in private business is elected to help run the country.

Will the Governor of New Jersey intervene in behalf of the slayer of the Mattson boy when he is apprehended?

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Up after a restless night, much of it having been spent in wonder as to how a toothless maid could be so achingly One glance in the mirror brought conviction that the extra expanse was beyond my amateur efforts with a razor, so did go below for breakfast and a growl at everything in sight, including the cat that looked entirely too snug and contented. Then away to the barber's where gave explicit instructions as to care, caution and precaution, getting away from there without a pain and heading for the coffee club where did find that the world was not quite as black as I had dreamed an hour before.

Heard much of regret over the same accident that proved to be a Martin Johnson. Most respect nerve, and he had been hunting with a camera when the scrivener would not let him in. Common. And in the afternoon did go to ager of the Stevenson furniture store, in for a chat, and Joe Lynch. Quizzed about the Duke of Deer Creek. Thought everyone knew. He is Bill Radcliffe, mayor of Williamsport, and Circleville attorney. Dropped in to congratulate Clark Will on his new post as president of the Third monerie, but found him busy and could not wait. There goes Bish Given, who with Joe Burns has closed up the Darby Creek mansion for the winter months.

Talked with a youngster who wishes to be married, but says he cannot find an empty house in town. We need more houses, many of them. These new ones look mighty fine in the North End. Noted that work is in progress on the addition at the high school. However, with the village building Northward more rapidly than to the South it may not be long until we will have to erect another school north of the creek.

in the afternoon did go to Chillicothe to visit the cooking school of the Gazette. The hall was filled to overflowing, a pleasing fact for the show is the same as the one to be presented here by The Herald in March. Also enjoyed visits with Edward Chappell, of the Gazette, and J. K. Hunter, of the News Advertiser, both fine gentlemen. Pleased by promise of return visits.

How desolate the countryside appears at this time of year. It would look much better under a mantle of snow, but snow seems far away and may not come at all this winter. Anyway, the ground is getting plenty of moisture and for that the farmers are thankful.

Back to the village in the late afternoon, finding everything serene and not a thing changed. Home to dinner and a quiet evening with the youngsters, the wife being engaged. Deserted quite early, so after a brief sea-side with book and radio did lunch quite leisurely and then repair for the night.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

INVITATIONS GUARDED

WASHINGTON — This is the season in Washington when tiaras and top hats troop to the White House. The floor of the great East Room is slick and polished, the crystals in the huge chandeliers gleam like jewels, and the special staff of Negro butlers are spick and span in newly cleaned uniforms.

The pace of White House social life will be faster than usual this season. The President's trip to South America delayed the opening gun, and as a result has crowded the post-holiday calendar.

Never has the demand been greater for invitations to the White House receptions. Though the affairs are far from exclusive—the number of guests runs up to 2,000 at a single party—the socially-minded cover invitations as if they were passports to paradise.

The St. Peter who stands guard at the door is grey-haired, matronly Mrs. Edith Helm. Mrs. Helm owns and personally manages a large farm on the Wabash in Indiana, and likes to call herself a dirt farmer. But Washington society knows her as a woman of Eastern breeding, who uses tact when it will work and force when it won't.

When she closes a reception list, it stays closed.

"I play no favorites," says Mrs. Helm. "I never open the list for anybody."

She finds her job easier than it used to be, for the Roosevelts have done away with the practice of "getting behind the line." In previous administrations a select few were privileged, after they had shaken hands with the President, to step behind the cord and remain in the receiving room, looking with haughty superiority upon the other guests who were obliged to keep moving.

So Mrs. Helm rejoices that she has been relieved of the onerous task of separating the sheep from the goats.

THE BIG SHOT

Climbing into a taxi a Washington visitor directed the driver to take him to the Justice Department.

"I want the entrance nearest to Attorney General Cummings' office," he added.

"Is he in that department?" asked the driver.

"Certainly; he runs it."

"Huh," observed the driver, "from reading the newspapers I got the idea that J. Edgar Hoover was the big shot there."

Since 1934, three of the most powerful government agencies—the Treasury, Federal Reserve Board and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation—have been after his well-groomed scalp. But the dapper Californian has foiled every attempt to abolish his office.

What Is Modern, Old in Disease Treatment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE HEAR a great deal about the latest improvements in treatment and yet, as was suggested in the article yesterday, the most reliable methods we have are those which were available and used in Greece and Egypt a thousand years ago.

We probably apply them a little more scientifically, and undoubtedly our implements are more convenient.

The modern bed is a better bed to rest in than those which the ancients had. The ancient could get heat applied to an aching part but not so well as with the modern electric pad or hot water bottle.

Drugs are still a very important part of treatment, but most of the ordinary drugs which are used the most frequently are very ancient in their derivation. The better the doctor, the fewer the drugs he is liable to use. The great Dr. James Jackson, of Boston, considered opium, mercury, antimony and quinine the greatest drugs. Antimony, and quinine (except malaria), have dropped out of fashionable use, but opium and mercury are certainly used in one form or other as much as any drugs. Both of them are of great antiquity.

Castor oil was used by the Egyptians. Sodium bicarbonate has been used for many years. The salicylates are fairly modern, but have enjoyed a popularity for over 150 years. Ether and chloroform are not quite 100 years old, but are standard drugs for their purposes. Iodine of potassium was used on most men's lists and it has been used over 100 years. Digitalis, the heart remedy, has also over a century behind it.

Cathartics Ancient

Of the cathartics, besides castor oil, calomel is preparation of mercury; senna and aloes are of great antiquity, and magnesium sulphate, or Epsom salts, was introduced when Epsom Well became popular. Epsom, which is very popular now, has been used by the Chinese for centuries. Arsenic is an old and still valuable drug.

Aside from serums, vaccines and glandular products, the only drugs which are commonly used in internal medicine of modern date are adrenalin and the barbiturate hypnotics.

The modern skin specialist, so far as his local applications are concerned, could get along pretty well with mercury, sulphur, zinc oxide, salicylic acid and camphor—all of hoary respectability.

Diet has been used in a rough and ready manner for many centuries, but its scientific application is a quite modern, even contemporary, affair.

Surgery, though modern, has not made striking progress for a good many years, and many of its practitioners think that it is static. The X-ray and radium, which came in after surgery, are taking away much of its work in certain fields.

Physical therapy, massage, the use of water, are all quite old. They are at present enjoying a considerable revival.

Electrical treatment, except in the form of diathermy, has little application in modern medicine, although, of course, it is relatively modern.

Blood transfusion is a strictly modern and useful procedure, frequently necessary.

Much more than in diagnosis, the tried and true methods are the ones that stick in the art of treatment.

Poems That Live

EARLY DEATH

She passed away like morning dew
Before the sun was high;
So brief her time, she scarcely knew
The meaning of a sigh.

As round the rose its soft perfume,
Sweet love around her floated;
Admired she grew—while mortal doom
Crept on, unfeared, unnoted.

Love was her guardian Angel here,
But Love to Death resigned her;
Though Love was kind, why should we fear
But holy Death is kinder? —Hartley Coleridge

LOVE IN DREAMS

Love hath his poppy-wreath
Not Night alone.
I laid my head beneath
Love's lily throne:
Then to my sleep he brought
This antidote—
The flower of many a thought
And fancy fine:
A form, a face, no more;
Fairer than truth:
A dream from death's pale shore;
The soul of youth:
A dream so dear, so deep,
All dreams above,
That still I pray to sleep—
Bring Love back, Love! —Edward Rowland Sill

CHAPTER 49
SELDEN walked into the bar of the Bull Inn in search of the landlord, but only the potman was gently ushering the late stayers through the door.

"Where is Hucks?" he asked of the maid who had served him. "Hutchins—this is Selden speaking." He heard a laugh at the other end of the line.

"I thought you would be calling me up. I was expecting you over this afternoon."

Selden cut him short. "Never mind that now. Listen, Hutchins. Get your car at once, and come to Reid's cottage—you know where that is. Bring a couple of your men—armed, you understand. It's a matter of the utmost importance, but I can't explain, someone may be here any moment. I shall be there to meet you."

He rang off without waiting for more than Hutchins' astonished exclamation.

He flung open the front door and went out into the rain. The groups had quickly dispersed, but the road was illuminated with a blood-red stain where the lights from the bar shined through the red curtains.

Once clear of the front, Selden took to his heels, all deliberation changed to action, and fled up the lane to the cottage as though all the hounds were after him. The way was thick with mud, and the going slippery, but he never stopped to take breath till he saw a faint light among the trees. Then he stopped running and mopped his forehead, panting with the exertion. This latest development had upset all his careful plans. He walked towards the cottage, and suddenly came to a halt. A light was showing through a chink between the blinds, a thin line in the darkness. He walked firmly to the door and turned the handle.

Selden looked round; the light from the lamp was burning steadily, and shone on the face of Mrs. Thornton, who was sitting on the couch, in front of which was a small table on which were a bottle of whiskey and a glass.

She looked up expectantly at the visitor, and then her expression changed to blank amazement, and something like fear. She seemed to struggle for breath, and lay back with a groan.

"I am so glad to see you, Mr. Selden," she said haltingly, but her eyes were fixed on the door behind him. "I must explain my presence here. I was returning from Paynton Manor where I had been to see Colonel Graham at his request. I lost my way, and stumbled over a root. I am afraid I have sprained my ankle."

"It was lucky you were able to take shelter here," Selden said suavely.

"I thought that perhaps Mr. Reid would have been here, and he could have gone for a doctor."

"I have had some experience, can I be of assistance?"

"I am afraid not," she said with a look of pain. "I have bound it up myself with a handkerchief—if you would be so kind as to fetch the doctor. I am afraid I can't walk all the way to the village."

"I suppose you were hoping to find Miss Lawrence and the children here, and then Mr. Reid could have gone for the doctor," Selden said slowly.

"I did hear that they were stopping here, but my only thought was to get help. I would not have disturbed them otherwise."

"I think you were expecting someone else here," Selden said.

"They are the murderers of Sir Henry Severinge, and would have

WOODDELL ASKS OHIO TRAPPERS TO LIMIT CATCH

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14. — An appeal to trappers and others interested in wildlife, to aid in conserving furbearers was issued today by Conservation Commissioner L. Wooddell, after a survey by conservation division field men indicated heavy fur catches. Commissioner Wooddell declared that the value of furs taken in the state this season would be the highest in recent Ohio history.

"Mild weather and a good crop have contributed toward an unusually heavy catch of furs," Commissioner Wooddell said.

"Several buyers of furs have reported purchasers to date far in excess of the entire season's purchases a year ago."

"If the present weather conditions continue the fur crop is in danger of depletion to a point where the breeder stock will be endangered. If that happens the fur industry will be affected for generation to come. Muskrats, particularly, are suffering; but other species also are in danger."

The commissioner asked trappers to limit their catches. The open season on muskrat in the Lake Erie trapping district will not close until March 16, and will remain open in the inland trapping district until February 1. The mink season ends March 1. Taking of skunk, raccoon and opossum is legal until February 1. In several Ohio counties fox can be killed throughout the year; in others the season ends February 1.

STANFORD ACE ANOTHER HANSON

Hank Luisetti Pops in Baskets at Rate of Point-a-Minute When He's Right, and Team Helps Him Along

By WALTER JOHNS

Central Press Sports Writer

ANGELO (HANK) LUISETTI should win the Pacific Coast conference basketball championship again this year. What he means to say is that Stanford university should repeat. When you talk about Stanford you mean Luisetti.

Luisetti is the sensational forward of the Stanford team who scored 416 points in 29 games last year and is doing even better this season. Now about Luisetti.

Some of you may recall the name Vic Hanson. When he played basketball at Syracuse he was considered the best collegiate player ever to wear gym shoes. He soon was hooked into the pro ranks and finally as a coach of football. Others may recall Charlie Hyatt of Pittsburgh. There was a lad who was even better than Hanson—according to some observers. We now tell you, and thousands of others agree, that Luisetti is better than either Hanson or Hyatt.

Youngster and a Natural

Luisetti is a natural basketball player. He has everything: a sharpshooter from under or away from the basket with either hand, a brilliant dribbler, a fine passer, equally as good ball handler and, to top it off, a sensational defensive player. He has height—six feet three, and weight, 184 pounds (although he doesn't appear heavy), and his style of pegging for the hoop, a floating method, is eye-filling to watch.

Luisetti averaged 14 points a game last year. He scored 53 points in two games in the championship series with Washington, to win the loop title for his mates. He was named unanimously all-conference player. He scored 30 points in one game against Southern California. He was named on the Converse All-American team. He scored 15 points when Stanford whipped Long Island in New York for the latter's first defeat in 44 games. He was selected as the ace performer in Madison Square Garden that night. He slipped in 26 points in 20 minutes in Cleveland two night later!

Hankus-Pankus is a San Francisco Italian. He went to Galileo high school in Frisco. He is 20 years old. He plays only basketball. He hopes to go into the business field when he graduates.

The Rest of the Team

As remarked above, Stanford won the Pacific Coast title last year. They first had to win the southern division title, which they did by whipping Southern California in a one-game playoff.

Stanford has just completed a transcontinental trek, winning over all teams: Warrensburg (Mo.) Teachers, Canisius, Temple, Western Reserve, Long Island and Hamline. Their conference skied is tough and the Southern California team again is the nut to crack in the southern division, with Washington appearing tops up north.

Coach Johnny Bunn of Stanford, a small, affable guy who knows his beans, has other players on the squad besides Luisetti. His first-string club is composed of Luisetti, Capt. Dinty Moore, Howell Turner, Art Stoefer and Jack Calderwood. Moore made the all-conference second team last year. Turner was high among the coast scorers. Stoefer, the center, is a cousin of the tennis star, Calderwood, a real player, is the former San Mateo junior college ace.

Stanford employs a zone defense and a speedy attack. The important thing is to give the ball to Luisetti if he doesn't get it himself.

SECOND ANNUAL COUNTY BOXING TOURNAMENT NEARS

The second annual Pickaway county Amateur Boxing tournament will start in the Athletic Club gymnasium Monday evening. Entries are restricted to grade and high school pupils of Pickaway county.

All applications should be made by noon Saturday, Jan. 16.

Circleville high school expects to have nine to 12 youths entered, while Jackson township will have between 12 and 15.

Many of the boys entered are working out each afternoon in the C. A. C. gym.

TEDDY YAROSZ BEATS KRIEGER IN FAST MATCH

NEW YORK, Jan. 14. — (UP)—Teddy Yarosz of Pittsburgh, with the scalp of Brooklyn's hard-hitting Solly Krieger displayed on his belt, began gunning today for Seattle's Freddie Steele, present wearer of the middleweight boxing crown which once adorned Teddys head.

The former titleholder shook off vicious head smashes, then counterpunched his way to a very close 10-round over Krieger before 4,300 persons at the Hippodrome last night. The knee Yarosz injured in a match with Babe Risko on New Year's day 1935 appeared completely sound again.

Referee Billy Cavanagh and Judges Eddie Forbes and Joe Lynch evidently were impressed by Yarosz' speed and boxing ability because Krieger outpunched him from the second round on according to many of the ringside score sheets. It was not an unpopular decision with the crowd, however and they gave a great cheer when the former champ's hand was raised.

Yaroszfought a typical "Turney" battle.

About This and That In Many Sports

Football Amusement?

By BILL BRAUCHER

IS COLLEGE football an amusement business? Must the colleges pay taxes collected on admissions. The questions are just another headache coming up for the nine venerable gentlemen of the United States supreme court.

The treasury department has asked the department of justice to prosecute its claims to millions of dollars in taxes, impounded in many states, and it will be up to the supreme court to decide whether college football is an amusement or an educational enterprise.

If it's educational, as attorneys general in many states have ruled, the colleges do not have to pay the taxes already collected on football tickets, some of which has been kept back as far as 1933. Some schools have turned the tax money over to the government, but state universities and colleges have set it aside in a lump to await court judgment.

The government's case starts with investigation secretly made of the conduct of athletic finances at University of Georgia and Georgia Tech, but before the G-men are through they will go thoroughly into the case, from coast to coast.

That Word "Benefit"

State schools are pinning their hope on a clause in the 1932 revenue act which specifies exemptions if the proceeds of admissions "insure wholly or partly to the benefit of the university."

The prosecution claims football is not a "benefit" if athletes are hired just as a theater employs performers.

How Profits Spent

We are indebted to Mill Marsh, sports editor of the Ann Arbor News, for a resume of football earnings in the 15 years since Fielding H. Yost has been athletic director at the University of Michigan. The statistics give a graphic idea of how football "profits" are spent, and may help to answer the question of "benefit."

Marsh writes that though the bonded indebtedness of the board in control of physical education is more than $1,000,000, the football revenues of the last 15 years have more than three times paid for construction of the Wolverine stadium erected in 1927 and for the land that surrounds it.

Michigan's present athletic plant is valued at more than $3,500,000. A total of $3,393,247.17 has been expended during Yost's regime for permanent improvements, including the stadium, field house, intramural sports building, women's athletic building, Palmer field for women, ice skating rink, golf course consisting of 300 acres of land, site for additional tennis courts, intramural fields and purchase of land around the stadiums.

Grand Gate $4,240,915

During the 15 years the board has received a total of $7,032,676.43, of which $4,240,915.74 was from football gate receipts. The football stadium cost $950,000 to build, and the purchase price of land around it was $275,000. Of the total revenue, $1,500,000 was received from bonds issued, and $1,291,769.69 from all other incomes, including the $7 athletic fee from each student and gate receipts from all other sports besides football.

In addition to expenditures for additions and improvements, the board spent in 15 years $1,875,370 for operation of football, baseball, basketball, track, tennis, swimming, hockey, wrestling, golf, fencing, gymnastics, intramural sports and women's athletic activities. Coaches' salaries are included in this item. Plant maintenance and operation of various units has cost another $738,857.16. Interest and other expenses have been $746,172.

NICK FRASCILLA AHEAD OF MARK SET LAST YEAR

COLUMBUS, Jan. 14. — (UP)—Ahead of the pace he set a year ago when he established a new state scoring record, Nick Frascilla of Wooster begins a determined drive in an effort to retain his crown tonight when the Scots meet Denison at Granville.

The contest headlines a five game program involving Ohio teams.

Frascilla garnered 73 points in the first five contests. Wooster played last season and this year he has rolled up 83 in a corresponding number of games.

The Wooster star lost a chance to build up an even more impressive total during an eastern holiday swing when he was ejected on personal fouls from two of the three contests played.

Hardwick Wins Navy Position; To Leave Fleet

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 14. — (UP)—Lieutenant Harry J. Hardwick, Navy's new head football coach, will abandon his station on the Arizona with the Pacific fleet in time to arrive here Feb. 15.

Hardwick, star end on the 1924, 1925, and 1926 eleven, was named yesterday by Commander A. C. McFall, graduate athletic manager, to succeed Lieut. Tom Hamilton, who completed his third year of coaching at the academy last season. Hamilton will go to sea Feb. 1, McFall said.

Hardwick was associated here two years ago with Hamilton and is well acquainted with his system. He also was assistant football coach here in 1928 and 1929. The following year he was mentor of the championship eleven of the Pacific fleet. In 1931 he returned here as end coach.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

INSTRUCTIVE STRATEGY

OF COURSE the best bridge lesson is watching experts bid and play. The next best lesson is reading what such players have done. The day for learning the game either from a teacher or text-book seems largely a thing of the past. Two important lessons are to be learned from today's deal. The first is that leading trumps as often as possible usually is the best means of defeating a contract agreed upon by declarer and dummy, after each has shown a different suit. The second lesson is that taking a finesse sometimes may prove ruinous.

Bidding went: North, 1-Heart, third hand; South, 2-Diamonds; North, 2-Spades; South, 4-Spades. East was smart enough to realize that trumps must be led at once, and repeated as frequently as possible. Three leads of trumps would defeat the contract. The 3 of spades was led. Declarer's 9 took the trick. He had to establish his hearts to go game. His led his K. East's Ace won the trick. That player could not afford to lead a spade, up to declarer, so he tried to put partner in to do the dirty work. The Q of clubs was led. Dummy's 6 was played. West's K held the trick. West caught his partner's idea, and led back a trump through declarer. Had North fessed his Q, East would have won with the K, and led back his last trump, thereby defeating the contract a trick. Declarer saw what was up. He won with his Ace. He led his Q of hearts, then he led the 6 of hearts. Dummy ruffed, establishing the remainder of the suit for declarer. Dummy's last club was led back. Declarer's Ace won the trick. Dummy used its last trump to ruff the last club held by declarer. Now all cards held by declarer were good, with the exception of having to give East his top trump. The Ace of diamonds was led. A low diamond was ruffed with next to declarer's last trump. East played his last diamond. Even if East had ruffed it would have done declarer no harm. The 3 of diamonds was led, picking up East's 10 of the suit. Then the good 8 of hearts was led. East ruffed with his only remaining spade. Both declarer and East had played exceptionally well. West had been very capable also. Many a player would not have thought of winning the club trick and leading back a trump.

For a first course serve grapefruit salad with olives and cheese. Cut grapefruit in halves, remove pulp in large pieces with teaspoon or grapefruit spoon; remove fibers, refill with fruit sections and pour over it French dressing made with lemon—not vinegar.

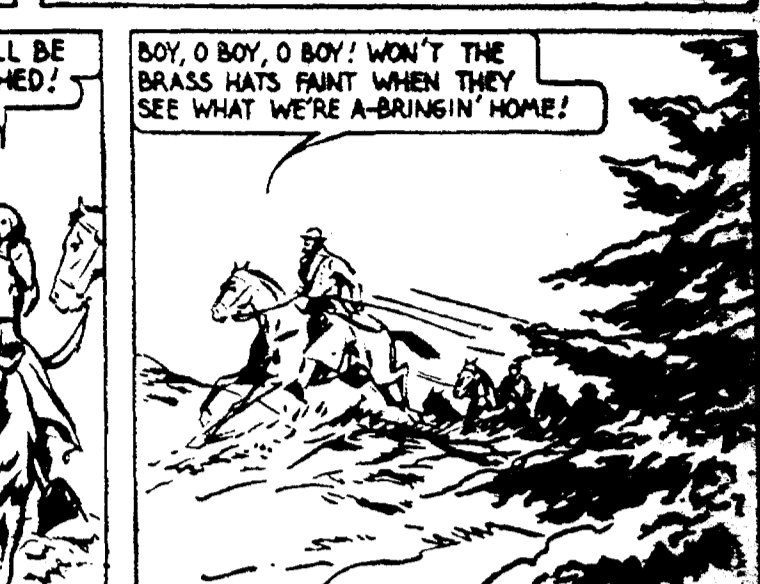

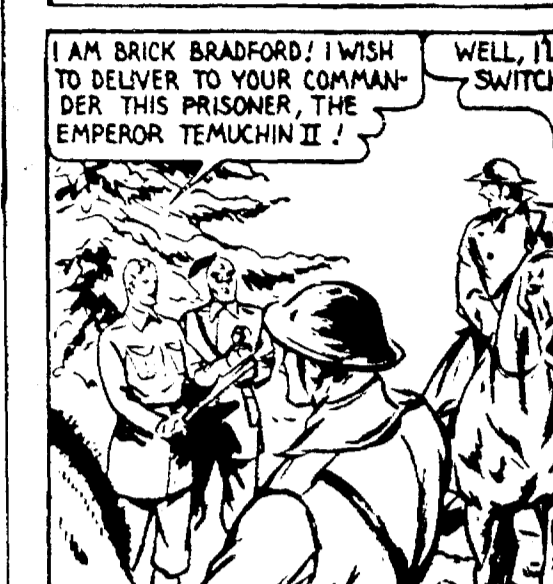

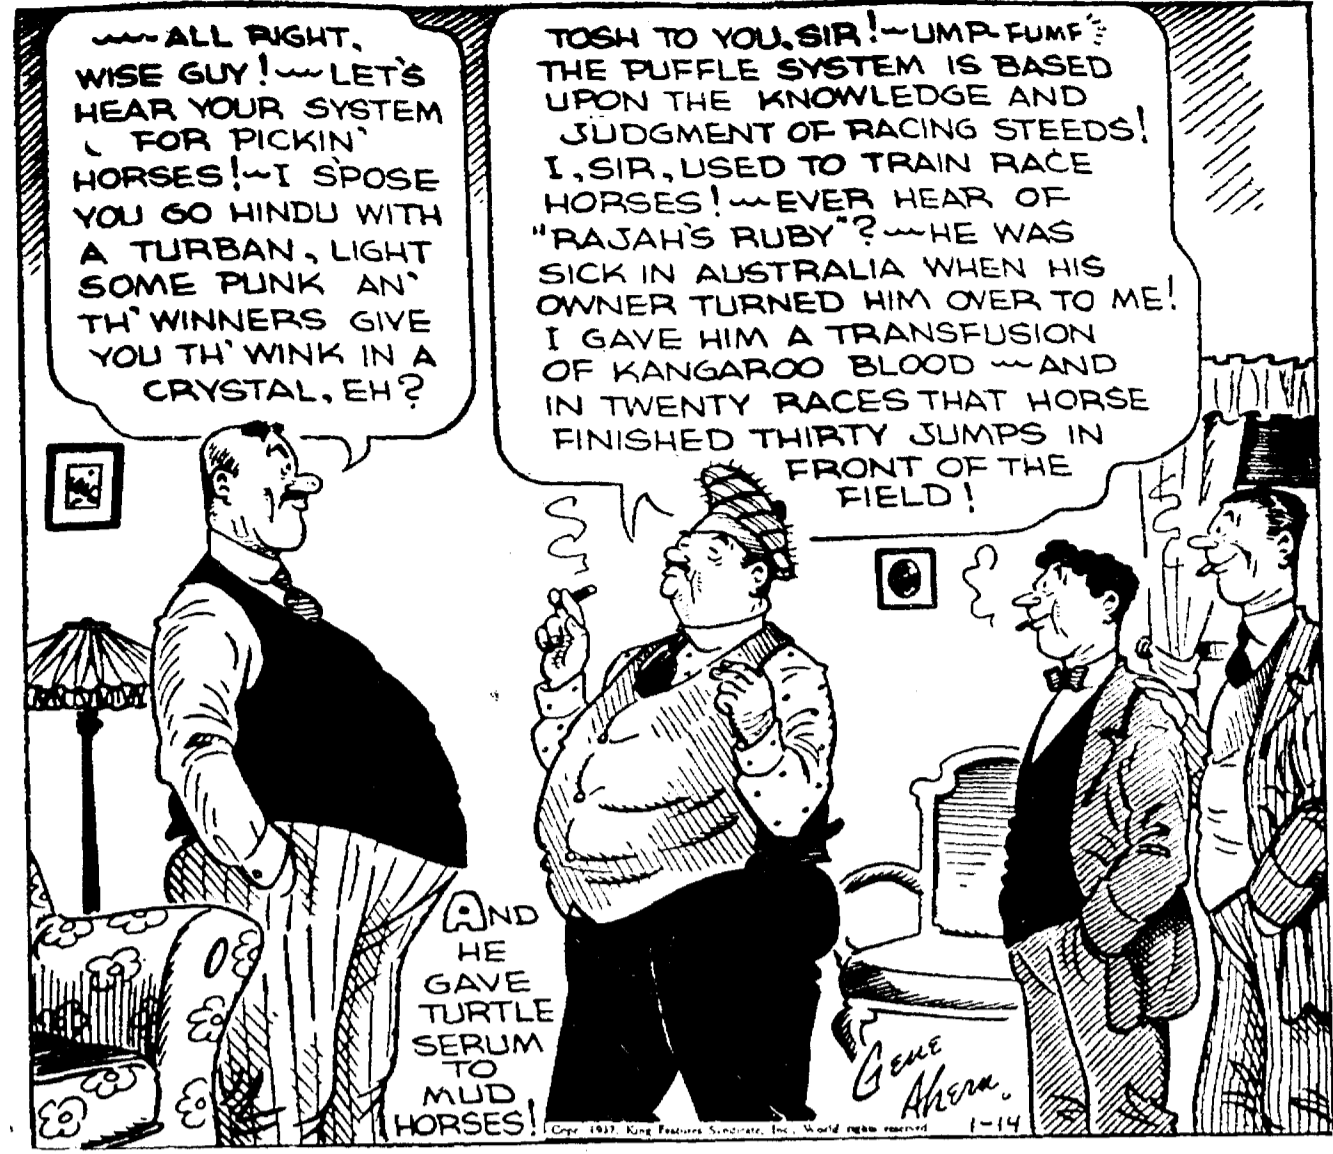

Brushing molds with a thin coating of salad oil will prevent gelatin salads from sticking. Says Ann Sothorn, screen player
